Description

Appearing in late winter to early spring, 'Brandywine' delivers delicate blooms in graceful colors to shade and part shade areas. This group promises plenty of doubles and anemones, as well as dark reds, spotted pinks, picotees, and apricots. Their common name is Lenten Rose because they bloom around the beginning of lent. They tolerate almost full sun to almost full shade, although dense shade may reduce flower production. Hellebores provides striking beauty when other plants are still buried beneath the snow. When the flowers are obscured by new leaves, the foliage provides a wonderful evergreen groundcover. Expect mix and match flowers with varying spots and bright center eyes to pop up as plants reseed and naturalize.
